CLASS OF 2015
IIP INTERNSHIP
FAO, ROME, ITALY

DESCRIPTION OF WORK

I worked for Dr. Rebecca Metzner in the FIPI division at the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations for 8 weeks. My responsibilities included the following:

- * Editing Governance of Tenure in South Korea publication (13 papers in total). [In press]
  - * Translating documents from Korean to English.
  - * Editing ITE documents for publication. [In press]
  - * Researching and writing memos on UN universities. Contributing to devising curriculum for a new UN university in South Korea.

MOST REWARDING ASPECT ABOUT THE INTERNSHIP

The most rewarding aspect about this internship was working in an international environment and interacting with people from different cultural backgrounds. I learned so much from my colleagues, and this experience broadened my perspective.

HOW MY WORK IMPACTED THE ORGANIZATION

I believe that my biggest contribution to the organization this summer was editing the Governance of Tenure documents for publication. These documents were prepared several years ago and they were the result of a conference on labor rights in fisheries held in South Korea. Because the documents were written in Korean, they had to be translated into English and edited. Because I am bilingual, I was able to translate and edit these documents for publication.

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

This internship was an invaluable and unforgettable experience for me. At FAO, I learned the importance of international cooperation in issues like governance of tenure and resource management. I would recommend this internship to anyone interested in resource economics and international cooperation and development issues.
